

Criminal Record Check with Vulnerable Sector Check

Verification of Requirement

To Whom it May Concern:

This letter will verify that, pursuant to the Counselling Therapists Act, S.N.S. 2008, c. 37. and its associated Regulations, Bylaws and Policies, and for the exclusive purpose of registration and licensure with the Nova Scotia College of Counselling Therapy, is required (NSCCT Policy R-07.0 and R-07.1) to produce a Criminal Record Check with Vulnerable Sector Check conducted by either the RCMP or Halifax Regional Police, at the time of initial licensing and again at five-year intervals.

This information is collected under the authority and protections of Section 40 (c)(i) of the Access to Information and Protection of Privacy Act.

Working as a paid counselling therapist, will require the above-named individual to provide short and/or long-term one-on-one care to a variety of children, adolescents and adults of various capacities and levels of mental and/or emotional distress or disability (often with addictions and in some cases victims of crime). The typical counselling therapy encounter occurs in private, most-often in a closed room. Discussions routinely involve disclosure and discussions of intimate matters (including of a sexual nature). Importantly, the counselling therapy relationship is one that has trust at its core. The intimate and trust-based nature of counselling therapy creates an environment in which sexual misconduct is of significant concern to NSCCT as the regulator governing the conduct of counselling therapists. Currently, 32% of misconduct complaints made against a counselling therapist involve an accusation of sexual misconduct.
